REPUBLICAN TICKET.
For Delegate to Congress,
HON. TRANQUILINO LUNA, of Valencia County.

Capt. J. W. Barney, of Las Vegas, has honored our humble sanatorium with a call. —Wallace, Editor.
The captain is just returning from the convention. It takes him a long time to recover from success.

The liquor dealers' association of Michigan wrote to Governor Jerome, who has been re-elected by the republicans, asking what his attitude was upon the prohibition. He replied that he stood upon the platform of his party, which favors the submission of a constitutional amendment to the people and leaves them to decide the question for themselves.

A Massachusetts law makes the owner of a house liable for trouble any loss that may be sustained by gambling therein with his consent. A saloon keeper at Lowell has just been compelled to pay $1,800, the money going to a man who lost $800 playing poker on the premises. The first thing you know some "former of Kansas" man will be getting rich down there, by losing money in the buildings of responsible persons.

The prohibitionists had better scout that scientist who is now asserting that drinking is a symptom, and not a cause of crime, that liquor does not make criminals, but reveals them, as only men of criminal or illegitimate and unhealthy organizations ever drink to excess. His idea is that drunkards should be encouraged to continue drinking, as the sooner they drink themselves to death, thus exterminating an undesirable class, the better it will be for the race generally. This is all very well in that way, but as strychnine is more decisive and quite as cheap as alcohol, why not bane the vermin effectually and at once? There are periods when a drunkard must brace up, owing to a lack of funds, and at such times he may beget children. But few men may become progenitors after a close acquaintance with strychnine.

The democrats profess to be very confident of the election of their candidate for governor of New York. That party is very much given to counting chickens before they are hatched. No doubt there is some lukewarmness among the republicans as to the result of the election. There is far more to fear from democratic frauds in New York City than from republican dissimulation, and the machinery for checkmating these frauds was never in better condition than it is at the present time.

As financial affairs for 1882 and its successor hang to a very large extent upon the crop just gathered, let us take a look at the situation now presented. The nation has been remarkably favored, and the granaries are about as full as they ever were. The wheat crop is conservatively estimated at 600,000,000 bushels. It is well to consider how and where the immense surplus over home demand is to be marketed.

This year's wheat crop in Great Britain is estimated at 80,000,000 bushels. The annual consumption being about 200,000 bushels, a large part of the deficit will be supplied from American ports. France will be short about 25,000,000 bushels, Germany and Italy together about the same, and other countries will require not less than 120,000,000 bushels. Australia, which in former years raised enough for a considerable export, is this year an importer of this staple. Turkey, Russia and Austria, the great grain raisers of Europe, have but little to spare, so that most of the deficiency will necessarily be drawn from the United States. It is the belief of those who have made a careful review of the statistics, that we shall not only be able to supply all foreign demands, but have enough at home to abundantly meet our own needs. Since our harvest two years ago brought great distress to the working people, which found vent in strikes and at one time threatened serious financial disasters to the country. Now that the want of cheaper provisions is filled, and all danger of panic or even monetary stringency next winter averted, the president and the governors of states have a splendid chance to soar pyrotechnically in their Thanksgiving proclamation, due on or about November 1st. —Denver Tribune.

The Lone Mourner.
Brooklyn Eagle.
"Haven't got a few roses growing out in your back yard, I reckon," suggested a seedy looking man to the cashier, "a few little faded roses, with a bit of leaf and a string to tie 'em up with."
"Haven't got any back yard to begin with," replied the cashier.
"Not even a little bit of a pink or a blue bell or a forget-me-not?" sighed the seedy man, anxiously.
"Nothing of the sort," growled the cashier. "Don't keep 'em." "Couldn't you get me a dandelion or a bunch of grass?" entreated the seedy man. "Just a little something to put on a child's grave! A plain leaf, a sprig of parsley, just a cabbage leaf, even. I want something green for an infant's tomb. Can't you find me a little something to decorate my child's grave?"
"Been dead long?" asked the cashier, wiping his eyes.
"Three days," sobbed the bereaved.
"If I could only get a wisp of straw or a bale of hay to show that I had not forgotten that lone grave. Haven't you got an old pair of boots, a tomato can or some dead but loved pet you could let me have?"

"Take this!" roared the cashier, tearing the nosegay from his buttonhole. "God bless you," ejaculated the seedy man; "God bless you and yours! Do you think it will keep fresh while I walk to the cemetery, it is only four miles?"
"Walk man!" clamored the cashier, with misty eyes. "Walk! you must ride to that lone grave and deposit your offering of love. Here take this dollar and may the sweetness of your grief last long after its poignancy has been worn off on the grindstone of time."
The seedy man thanked him with streaming cheeks, but that night he was frozen out of a jackpot because the dollar was counterfeit and plugged at that.

"It is seldom we get a chance to do good," murmured the cashier, "and I don't think the mourner will come back," and he turned to his books with the careless air of a philanthropist and charged the managing officer with two week's pay he hadn't had.
